

Japanese folklore tells a love story played out in the heavens. The star Vega is known as the Weaving Princess, renowned for her skills on the loom. One day, while weaving in the Milky Way (‘star river’), she realized she had no time to fall in love. Her father, Tentei, the North Star, saw her daughter’s pain and united her with Kengyuu, a star from the other side of the ‘river’. Their marriage was so happy that she neglected her weaving, and her enraged father separated them, sending Kengyuu back across the Milky Way. On just one night of the year– the 7th day of the 7th month – the moon acts as a ferryman across the night sky, reuniting the couple. This special day is celebrated in Japan as the Tanabata Star Festival, bringing people together to tie paper wishes onto trees.
